(At Liz's birthday party)

Amber: Don't tell me you didn't go to Garden House.

Keith: Why would I go there?

Amber: For Liz's birthday cake! I left you a voice message this morning!

Keith: But you said Matt would go to the bakery! And why did you come here without me? I was waiting outside your apartment for an hour!

Amber: No! I said I'd have lunch with Matt, and we'd come straight here from the restaurant. So I asked you to help get the cake after work.

Keith: No, you did not! And why didn't you answer my calls?

Amber: My cellphone is dead! I said in the message that you could call Matt's number if you wanted to find me. Now please tell me you did bring the gift we got for Liz.

Keith: What gift? I'm sure you didn't say anything about a gift in the message.

Amber: I told you that yesterday!

Bubble tea is easy to find in many countries and is popular in the USA and some European countries. But not many people know it originated in Taiwan. Some people even thought it was an American drink.

A Taiwanese woman, Ko Ning-hui, owns a bubble tea shop in Switzerland. She wants to let people around the world know bubble tea comes from Taiwan, so it can become a symbol of Taiwan, like sushi for Japan and kimchi for Korea.

She did market research for three years before she could open her first bubble tea shop. To test the popularity of the drink, she served it for free with set meals to customers. After eight months of marketing, she finally opened her own bubble tea shop in Lausanne, Switzerland. She plans to open a second bubble tea shop in Lausanne and maybe a chain store in Geneva in the near future.
